THIS WEEK: NORTH

You have snapped photos of your favourite spot in our Little Red Dot and told us why you like it. Over the next four Mondays, we will feature some of the most creative entries for The Straits Times #myspotinthedot National Day contest.

Today, we feature people's favourite spots in Singapore's north. Watch this space as we will announce the winners of the National Day Parade or the Aug 1 Preview tickets.

On some evenings, my family will pack our dinner and have a picnic at Yishun dam in Yishun Avenue 1. It's a great place at which to unwind. Besides taking a relaxing walk with scenic views, you may also get to see eagles and kingfishers flying past!

The Singapore Zoo is where I started my career and enjoyed working for 43 years till retirement. My children grew up with many fun-filled weekends at the zoo. Now my grandchildren have that wonderful opportunity of enjoying the many fascinating animals and its beautiful surroundings.

Woodlands Waterfront where the sea breeze cools down the weekly stresses that pile up, providing comfort and serenity while we live, work and play in our Singapore. This place gives me a breather in our fast-paced lives. Everything here is slow and quiet.

My spot in the dot has to be the Kranji Memorial. One of the most peaceful places on earth and reminder of the price paid to achieve it.

Our nature trails offer a respite from the hustle and bustle of the city. My spot in the dot is the Butterfly Trail at Upper Peirce Reservoir.
