

State of play

For the first time since Independence, all seats are likely to be contested at the General Election. Nine parties are set to vie for 89 seats in 13 SMCs and 16 GRCs. The People's Action Party, Singapore People's Party, Singapore Democratic Alliance, Reform Party and Singaporeans First have announced their slates, although some last-minute changes may still occur. The Workers' Party and Singapore Democratic Party have announced their candidates but have not confirmed where they will stand. The National Solidarity Party and People's Power Party have yet to announce their candidates. The Straits Times gives a preview of the likely contenders for the constituencies across the country.
