

What happens when a train incident occurs

Information is beamed to the maintenance operations centre through sensors on board trains and track-side infrastructure.

Ground staff can feed information back to the maintenance operations centre through tablet devices and cameras, providing the centre with a real-time view of faults or defects.

Engineering specialists will tackle the problem and track the whereabouts of maintenance staff on the ground.

