

PIONEERING

THE FUTURE SERIES

PRESENTED BY THE EDB SOCIETY
AND THE STRAITS TIMES

You can now find out how and why Singapore has managed industrial relations well in the past 50 years, by asking Manpower Minister Lim Swee Say, economist Lim Chong Yah and Singapore Airlines chairman Stephen Lee about it.

All three are stalwarts of tripartism in Singapore and they will speak on how it might change and how the way to work will have to change, from 4pm on Friday, Feb 26 at The Arts House.

Send your questions for them, with full contact details, to stedbpioneers@sph.com.sg by Feb 19. Questions will be shortlisted, and only those whose questions are shortlisted will be notified.

Say also in your e-mail if you would like to attend this forum. Seats are limited, and will be allotted on a "first come, first served" basis.
