

Treating seawater to meet Singapore's water needs

Some 430 million gallons of water are needed here daily, and this is expected to double by 2060. Singapore is building another desalination plant to make its water supply more resilient.

