MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE - FALLOUT (PG13)

147 mins

Fans of the Mission: Impossible series have come to expect big action - grounded in reality, not computer trickery - and they will be plenty happy to note that the sixth instalment offers a satisfying amount of top-grade smash-ups, on the ground and in the air.

Tom Cruise (above), reprising his role as top agent Ethan Hunt, creates vehicular mayhem in the streets of Paris and makes gravity-defying leaps across London's rooftops in just two of this movie's spectacular setpiece stunts.

After the escape of terrorist leader Solomon Lane (Sean Harris), the Mission: Impossible team is forced to work with CIA agent Walker (Henry Cavill) as they try to foil Lane's plot to detonate bombs in major cities. But Hunt finds that his loyalty to his friends keeps getting in the way of the mission.

SET IT UP

Netflix/Any time on demand

Overworked and exhausted, office personal assistants Harper (Zoey Deutch, left) and Charlie (Glen Powell, far left) come up with the perfect plan to finally get some free time for themselves - by setting up their respective bosses Kirsten (Lucy Liu) and Rick (Taye Diggs) on a date with each other.

It is a simple premise, but the film, now showing on Netflix, has gotten strong reviews for its low-key charm that is reminiscent of classic 1990s romantic comedies.
