COLOR OUT OF SPACE (NC16)
111 minutes

This genre-bending, trope-smashing work gleefully blends body horror with science fiction, Stephen King-style small-town spookiness with 1980s-style creature effects. Think John Carpenter's The Thing (1982).

Another terrific, artist-driven work from SpectreVision, the production house co-founded by actor Elijah Wood, this adaptation of a classic H.P. Lovecraft story follows what happens after a meteorite lands in the yard of Nathan Gardner (Nicolas Cage). One by one, family members fall prey to a hungry space organism.

South-African born writer and director Richard Stanley has a long and chequered Hollywood history. Here, he shows that he has a distinct and artful style, one that has put him at odds with major studios for years: Grief takes the form of monsters from the ghastliest of nightmares.

BRING ME HOME (NC16)
108 minutes

This South Korean missing-child thriller, called "not for the faint-hearted" by The Hollywood Reporter, stars Lee Young-ae (right), who gained global fame as the title character in Park Chan-wook's Lady Vengeance (2005). Here, she is not out for revenge but to find her son, who vanished 14 years ago. The implacably determined mother, who still puts up posters of her child, one day receives a clue that puts her in the path of ruthless gangsters.
