

Keep your distance at work, home and play

Stepped-up safe-distancing precautions are being put in place as part of Singapore's fight against Covid-19.

These work in tandem with other measures like border controls, contact tracing and quarantine.

AT WORK

- Employers should use technology so workers can work from home.
- Meetings should be held virtually.
- Where this is not possible, employees should have staggered working hours.
- Employees should be split into at least three groups with reporting and ending times separated by at least an hour.
- Reporting and ending times should not coincide with peak-hour travel.
- Work stations should be at least 1m apart.
- Physical meetings should be reduced and shortened.
- Critical work events that must be held cannot exceed 250 participants; social-distancing measures should apply at these events.

AT PLAY

- All events and gatherings, ticketed or otherwise, with 250 or more people will be suspended until June 30.
- Events with fewer than 250 people must also have in place precautionary measures like:

- Social distancing of at least 1m apart;
- Better ventilation;
- Temperature and health screening;
- Those who are unwell must be turned away; and
- Contact details must be obtained for possible future tracing.
- Queues must be kept fast-moving – for example, all checkout counters should be open and people should also be able to self-checkout;
- People should stand 1m apart in queues.
- Customers at hawker centres and restaurants should sit 1m apart.
- Entertainment venues like cinemas must reduce capacity and ensure at least 1m between patrons.

An employee at Koi at Nex in Serangoon places a customer's order on a designated area on the counter. (The red crosses are where drinks are not to be placed).

AT HOME

- Minimise private parties, home visits.
- Families can continue eating together but instead of eating out, they can do takeaways and dine in.
- Seniors should maintain good personal hygiene, such as avoiding touching their faces.

- Family members should take care when interacting with seniors. They should not go near seniors if they feel unwell.
- Public senior-centric activities will continue to be suspended until April 7.
- Organisers to take precautionary measures when senior-centric activities are resumed. Meanwhile, there can be virtual activities for seniors to do together remotely: for example, exercise, singing and watching cooking videos.