Being globally connected

How well do Singapore students understand, and act on, global and intercultural issues? Here's a look at the Pisa 2018 results on global competence.

When communicating with people who do not understand their language well, most Singapore students can find alternative ways to communicate, like gesturing, re-explaining, or writing

More than 7 in 10 keep themselves informed about world events via social networks and more than 8 in 10 reduce energy consumption at home to protect the environment

They are aware of some global issues more than others

More than 8 in 10 are confident of explaining issues related to climate change

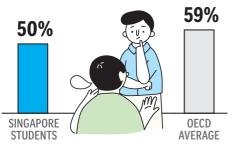

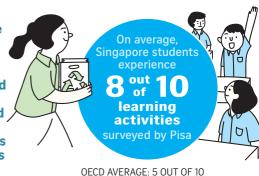

1 in 3

on global health* and international conflicts

1 in 2 students believes that he can deal with novel situations

Singapore schools expose students to learning activities like discussions and work with the community and agencies to raise awareness of global issues

Speaking two or more languages contributes to global competency

More than 9 in 10 Singapore students can speak at least two languages

OFCD AVERAGE: 7 OUT OF 10

Top 5 in global competence
Singapore	576
Canada	554
Hong Kong (China)	542

Scotland (United Kingdom)

534

527

*Data was collected before the Covid-19 pandemic.

Taiwan