

Protecting coastlines

A study looking into how a stretch of coastline in Singapore's south-east can be better protected from rising sea levels will start this week. This is the first of four studies looking into specific segments of the nation's coasts, and covers 57.8km of coastline across three areas.

