

PM Lee's response to allegations

- Mr Lee Kuan Yew had signed off on plans to redevelop house in 2012, and was prepared to consider alternatives to demolishing it should the Government decide otherwise.
- As beneficiary of estate, PM Lee was entitled to be consulted on deed of gift. As PM, he had every right to see it. He confronted siblings on it because the conditions they had imposed on the National Heritage Board with regard to the gift were "wrong".

- Son Hongyi is not interested in politics and "if Ho Ching ever behaves improperly", Temasek Board, the President and the Council of Presidential Advisers "know what their duty is".

MPs say:

END THE SAGA NOW

The dispute is "not (a) Korean drama show" and PM Lee should put a stop to it by taking his siblings to court.

- Workers' Party chief Low Thia Khiang, who said a 'hallmark' of the PAP Government is to get to the bottom of things in court

PARLIAMENT IS RIGHT FORUM

Even a special select committee, which might have the time, space and opportunity to gather evidence and go into detail, will ultimately submit its report to Parliament.

- Senior Minister of State Janil Puthuchery, on how Parliament was the right place to deal with the issue transparently

UPHOLD RULE OF LAW

"We must give due weight to Mr Lee's wishes... However, it will not be right to demolish the house solely because he had wished it. The Mr Lee that I grew up... respecting would not put his personal desires above the interests of the country."

- Nominated MP Chia Yong Yong, on following due process

WHO DRAFTED WILL?

"We don't even know who drafted the will. Was it Suet Fern? If so, why not just come out and admit it? What is he afraid of? Why does he try and deny that his wife drafted it, when e-mails seem clear?"

- MP Lee Bee Wah, on the role of Mr Lee Hsien Yang and his wife Lee Suet Fern in the drafting of Mr Lee Kuan Yew's final will
